Differential Equations in Vision, Graphics and Design

Demetri Terzopoulos

dt@cs.toronto.edu

New York University and University of Toronto, Canada

Physics-based modeling approaches in the fields of computer vision, computer graphics and geometric design make extensive use of ordinary and partial differential equations and associated numerical techniques. This talk will cover the formulation and application of deformable models of curves, surfaces and solids, as well as biomechanical models for the animation of virtual animals and humans.