Detection of inclusions from localized boundary measurements in the electrical conductivity problem

Takanori Ide

Mathematics, Tokyo metropolitan university

takaide@katch.ne.jp

Abstract

Suppose given physical body in dimension two, and that the electrical conductivity distribution inside the body consists of conductive inclusions in a known background. We propose reconstruction formula for the location of inclusions from localized boundary measurements based on hyperbolic geometry. And we demonstrate the numerical experiments for our proposal algorithm.