

Special solutions for some elliptic systems and applications

Jenn-Nan Wang
Mathematics, National Taiwan University
jnwang@math.ntu.edu.tw

Abstract

In this talk I would like to discuss how to construct special solutions with general complex phases for some elliptic systems in the plane. The important property of these solutions is that they decay exponentially on one side of some curve and grow exponentially on the other side of the same curve. These solutions are very useful in the object identification problem. I will show some numerical results if time permitted.